President rejects Iran's seven-day offer to reopen the Strait and reschedules the bombing for after the midterms; his U.N. ambassador goes on Fox to say the $6.48 diesel came from Ukraine

One More Question

I wrote down everything that came across the wire on Thursday the seventeenth. Just that one day. In order, the way it reached me, and then I'll stop.

Every Democrat in the Senate except Senator Fetterman signed a letter pressing Secretary Hegseth for a cost breakdown of the war in Iran. The Pentagon's policy chief, Elbridge Colby, briefed the Senate Armed Services Committee behind closed doors, and lawmakers of both parties came out saying they had not gotten clear answers. Fox News published a poll: seventy percent of voters say the president lacks a clear strategy, sixty percent say the military action was the wrong decision. The U.N. fact-finding mission on Iran reported "reasonable grounds" to believe the United States committed war crimes in two airstrikes; the Times wrote that the mistakes behind the deaths of more than a hundred children "went beyond negligence." U.S. officials told CBS that Iran had downed at least two American drones. Iran called the American account of an Air Force colonel's rescue "fictional and unacceptable." And the President told Axios, "I have a big decision coming up. Do I want to go in and annihilate them, or do I not?"

The line is farmers first, and the line holds. Walk the week with me and you will see it holds.

Tuesday the 15th, the Congressional Budget Office closed its books and priced the war at $38 billion. In a federal budget that is a rounding er— it is not a rounding error, I would never say that, it is $38 billion of real money, and the Budget Office calls that figure conservative. Conservative is our word. It means careful. It also means the number has room to go up, which is not the point I was making. The point I was making is that we are careful.

Wednesday the 16th, the Speaker sent the House home a day earlier than scheduled for a seven-week recess so members could "go home to their districts and make the case to the American people." Representative Massie, of our own party, says the early adjournment blocked his impeachment effort against the Secretary. Both things can be true. One of them is a calendar. Also Wednesday, Truthout reported the President has made more stock trades since 2025 than all 535 members of Congress combined, more than 80 trades per market day in his first 17 months. That is confidence in American

Nine months after the military removed Venezuela's president, the 30-minute operation that booked 65 billion barrels — 35 percent of it to the Pentagon — leaves the driver stretching a gallon at a record $4.15 until the savings arrive in a year or two.

A reconciliation is two columns and the difference between them, and you do not need an opinion to run one. You need the filings and a straight edge. Here are the filings for one fortnight.

Friday, September 4. Energy Secretary Chris Wright was back in the United States from Venezuela, and CBS reported that Wright said the new oil deal between the two nations would bring gas prices down in a year or two. Filed that same Friday, by the Washington Examiner: the national average price of diesel reached $5.85, passing the all-time high of $5.81 set in May 2022 after Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The asset side opens with a promise. The price side opens with a record.

Sunday, September 6, The Hill printed the count. The administration had reached a deal granting it control of more than 65 billion barrels, and Wright's assessment was, "We have a lot of leverage over Venezuela." The New York Times priced that same Sunday at nearly $4.15 a gallon, with Brent up about 1 percent as trading resumed. Sixty-five billion barrels in the asset column, a national average of nearly $4.15 in the price column, both filed on

Put me on the political desk, because here is what that stadium was rented to sell. The top item on the Senate's calendar for the two weeks the House is gone is, per NBC, an NCAA-backed bill setting federal guidelines for the athletes. The Nation ran it Friday: the bill threatens athletes' labor rights. The labor rules get sold from the fifty-yard line, and the man in the upper deck pays half price for the beer that seated him in time to cheer.

NO SHORT TITLE

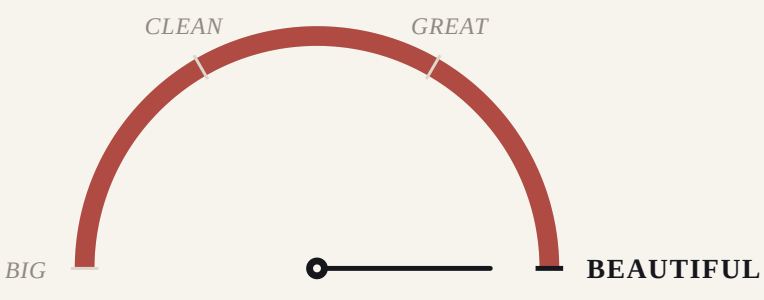

The adjective did not make it into the law. The short title "One Big Beautiful Bill Act" was struck in the Senate, and Public Law 119-21 carries only its official title: "An Act to provide for reconciliation pursuant to title II of H. Con. Res. 14" [1].

What stayed in, by the Congressional Budget Office's final count: $3.4 trillion added to deficits from 2025 through 2034, and 10 million more people uninsured in 2034 [2]. Its distributional analysis found the lowest tenth of households losing about $1,200 a year, 3.1 percent of income, while the top tenth gains about $13,600 [3]. And the clean coal: on Lazard's latest cost tables coal runs $72 to $177 a megawatt-hour against $40 to $98 for utility solar, and coal-mining employment went from 40,500 in January 2025 to 38,100 in August 2026 [4][5]. Beautiful was the one word the Senate removed.

REPUBLICAN

BEAUTIFUL

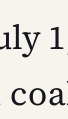

It is his favorite adjective, and he put it on the paperwork. The reconciliation bill went to the Senate as the One Big Beautiful Bill, passed there 51 to 50 on July 1, and was signed on July 4, 2025 [1]. His April 2025 order on coal is titled "Reinvigorating America's Beautiful Clean Coal Industry" [2].

The argument for the adjective is the argument for the bill as its backers made it: that one package moving taxes, the border and spending together beats a dozen separate fights, and that a president who believes the package is good for the country is entitled to name it that way. What the word promised is on this side. What the Senate did to the word, and what the Congressional Budget Office found inside the law, is on the other.

“The One Big Beautiful Bill. Except it isn't — the Senate struck the name, and the law went on the books as "An Act to provide for reconciliation pursuant to title II of H. Con. Res. 14." They took beautiful out and left the rest in: three point four trillion in new deficits, ten million more uninsured, twelve hundred dollars a year out of the bottom tenth and thirteen thousand six hundred into the top. Beautiful was the one word that couldn't survive the Senate.”

— Sal

“The short title was removed for procedural reasons, which is itself a beautiful feature of our process, and the budget office's numbers are projections — which is to say, estimates of exactly how beautiful it will turn out to be.”

WHAT HAPPENED. The president promised $5,000 checks if Republicans keep Congress, and Treasury said it is examining paying without a vote.

WHO GETS PAID. Republican candidates in tight races get a $5,000 promise to run on; the vice president carried it to Kansas for Senator Marshall the same week.

WHAT SLIPS. Congress's power to decide what the Treasury spends slips if the department can mail $1.3 trillion without a vote.

WHAT'S NEXT. The checks are promised for November and the coverage 750,000 people lost ended in September; the president's own precedent is the $1,776 checks that went to service members.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

The authorization requirement — the plain old arrangement in which Congress votes and then the Treasury spends — died Tuesday in a hearing room, before lunch. It is survived by an examination at the Treasury Department. A rule dies and no casserole comes. That is the shit of it: it takes two sentences and a lunch break.

Here is the week, laid out the way we lay these out....

...(cont) On Wednesday the ninth, at the party's midterm convention in Dallas, the president said American adults would receive $5,000 if Republicans keep control of Congress come November. By Thursday the tenth the Washington Examiner had an explainer up — "Trump's promised $5,000 'dividend' checks: What to know" — the sort of clean work a paper does when it believes something is going to happen. Late that Wednesday, hours after the president spoke, Bret Baier put the total to the vice president on Fox, roughly $1.3 trillion, and said critics would call it bribing voters. "I can hear the critics' heads exploding," Baier told Vance.

Then the objections came in on schedule, from his own side, which is how the arrangement was supposed to work. Friday, Susan Collins called the proposal "extraordinarily costly" and noted it carried no income cap. Saturday, at the Kansas State Fair, a debate moderator put the cost at $1.2 trillion and asked the two candidates where they stood; Roger Marshall appeared to shift. Sunday, Mike Flood said the priority should be funding the troops and replenishing stocks amid the Iran war. Lawler, the same day, deflected and asked how you pay for it. The Hill printed Monday what the president had said Sunday outside Air Force One: the checks will "happen 100 percent" if the GOP keeps its majority. That same Monday, National Review called the dividend reckless and said the checks would make inflation worse and echo the sort of "socialism" the president decries, and Guy Benson said on Fox News that conservatives would scream "bloody murder" if a Democratic president offered a dividend to maintain power. Also that Monday, MAGA Inc. deployed the vice president to Kansas to help Marshall, whose race the Cook Political Report rates likely Republican.

Six days of arguing about the price. That part is penny-ante.

By Tuesday The Hill had the fiscal hawks on the record: they would not support giving away money to people who don't work or pay taxes. And on Tuesday, before the House Financial Services Committee, Secretary Bessent said Treasury was examining whether the money could be issued without authorization from Congress. In the same testimony he defended a faltering bond-market intervention. That was the death. Not a vote lost, not a bill killed — a department saying out loud that it is looking into whether the vote is required, while the members whose votes it needed were still on television explaining they would not give them.

Senator Bernie Moreno was still trying it the long way, with legislation, funded through market access fees. Somebody ought to note that. It used to be the only way, and a whippersnapper reading this in ten years will want to know it was tried.

The authorization requirement is survived by 750,000 Americans removed from their health coverage. Your check is promised for November. The coverage ended in September.

It is preceded in death by the $1,776 checks that went to service members, which the president offered as the precedent for this one.

In lieu of flowers, ask whoever wants your vote in November to say, on the record and before any check is printed, whether the Treasury may spend money Congress has not voted.

WHAT HAPPENED. The budget office priced the Iran war at $38 billion and called the number conservative.

WHO GETS PAID. Energy sellers collected the $121 billion households paid extra since the war began, $1,760 a household by Moody's count.

WHAT SLIPS. Every Senate Democrat but one had to write a letter to get the war's cost, and senators with clearances left the briefing without answers.

WHAT'S NEXT. If Congress keeps asking by letter, the war keeps its own calendar; that is what Congress got after March 2019: both chambers voted to end the Yemen war, the veto held, the war ran 21 more months. This one is already scheduled past the midterms.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

The line is farmers first, and the line holds. Walk the week with me and you will see it holds.

Tuesday the 15th, the Congressional Budget Office closed its books and priced the war at $38 billion. In a federal budget that is a rounding error— it is not a rounding error, I would never say that, it is $38 billion of real money, and the Budget Office calls that figure conservative. Conservative is our word. It means careful. It also means the number has room to go up, which is not the point I was making. That is the point I was making is that we are careful....

...(cont) Wednesday the 16th, the Speaker sent the House home a day earlier than scheduled for a seven-week recess so members could "go home to their districts and make the case to the American people." Representative Massie, of our own party, says the early adjournment blocked his impeachment effort against the Secretary. Both things can be true. One of them is a calendar. Also Wednesday, Truthout reported the President has made more stock trades since 2025 than all 535 members of Congress combined, more than 80 trades per market day in his first 17 months. That is confidence in American markets, and confidence is what the farmer needs right now, which is a sentence I would like back.

Thursday the 17th, Moody's Analytics estimated that U.S. consumers have spent $121 billion extra on energy alone since the war began less than eight months ago, an average of $1,760 a household. That is not policy, that is the market, and the market moved because Iran shut commercial shipping traffic in the Strait of Hormuz in response to our strikes, which is context, and context is not causation, and I would appreciate it if you cut the second half of that clause.

Also Thursday, the U.N. fact-finding mission on Iran said it found "reasonable grounds" that the U.S. military committed war crimes in two airstrikes inside Iran, and The New York Times reported the mission found that mistakes leading to the deaths of more than a hundred children "went beyond negligence." The mission accused Iran's government of crimes against humanity against its own citizens. The White House responded to the report. I want the whole record in the room, and that is the whole record.

That same Thursday, every Senate Democrat except Senator Fetterman signed an open letter to Secretary Hegseth pressing him for a cost breakdown of the war. The Hill called it largely symbolic and said it reflects frustration. Also Thursday, Pentagon policy chief Elbridge Colby briefed the Senate Armed Services Committee behind closed doors, and lawmakers of both parties came out saying they did not get clear answers on the National Defense Strategy or the ongoing war. Our own senators. So the people with the clearances cannot get the number either, which is — that is a briefing problem, not a war problem. A Fox News poll the same day found 71 percent think the administration lacks a plan to end the Iran war and 60 percent now call the military action the wrong decision. Polls move.

Thursday the President told Axios' Barak Ravid: "I have a big decision coming up. Do I want to go in and annihilate them, or do I not? It's a big decision. Anything could happen with me."

Friday the 18th, Matt Bell, who has farmed in North Carolina for more than half his life and voted for the President, told CBS News that farmers are "all just in survival mode," that they were "sold a bill of goods," and that "I can't stay in business." Friday, Senator Tillis, who voted to confirm the Secretary, said: "He needs to go." Costco has capped motor oil purchases.

The line is farmers first. The Budget Office says $38 billion, conservatively. Mr. Bell says survival mode. Both figures are official.

Nine months after the military removed Venezuela's president, the 30-minute operation that booked 65 billion barrels — 35 percent of it to the Pentagon — leaves the driver stretching a gallon at a record $4.15 until the savings arrive in a year or two.

● THE SHORT VERSION
Typed by Sol

WHAT HAPPENED. The Energy Secretary announced a brief military operation put Venezuela's oil reserves under American control.

WHO GETS PAID. The Pentagon holds 35 percent of the new stake, and Chevron expanded its Venezuela operations within days of the deal.

WHAT SLEPS. Congress never voted on the military operation that removed Venezuela's government and rescued its oil, so no war powers check occurred.

WHAT'S NEXT. If Congress keeps declining to vote, the operation runs unchecked; that is what Washington got after June 24, 2011: a Libya resolution failed and the operation ran four more months, over 26,000 sorties.

AS TEAM ON THE FROST

A reconciliation is two columns and the difference between them, and you do not need an opinion to run one. You need the filings and a straight edge. Here are the filings for one fortnight.

Friday, September 4. Energy Secretary Chris Wright was back in the United States from Venezuela, and CBS reported that 65 billion barrels, the most popular travel words of the season, would bring gas prices down in a year or two. Filed that same Friday, by the Washington Examiner: the national average price of diesel remained $5.85, passing the all-time high of $5.81 set in May 2022 after Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The asset side opens with a promise. The price side opens with a record...

...(cont) Sunday, September 6. The Hill printed the count. The administration had reached a deal granting it control of more than 65 billion barrels, and Wright's assessment was, "We have a lot of leverage over Venezuela." The New York Times priced that same Sunday at nearly $4.15 a gallon, with Brent up about 1 percent as trading resumed. Sixty-five billion barrels in the asset column, a national average of nearly $4.15 in the price column, both filed on Sunday. OPEC Plus decided that Sunday to keep production steady. One week after saying Venezuela is being "forced to work" with the United States, Common Dreams reported, Wright denied that the administration was stealing Venezuela's oil.

Monday brought the holiday number. AAA's figure was $4.15 per gallon, the highest gasoline has ever been during Labor Day weekend, one of the most popular travel weekends of the year; ABC put the weekend average at $4.14. The Times spent Monday with hypermiling tips, the consumer technique to stretch a gallon. The asset side booked entries Monday as well: the New York Post reported that U.S. forces destroyed three Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps crude oil tankers in the Persian Gulf on Saturday, after Iran launched ballistic missiles at two U.S. Navy vessels. Three tankers of crude taken off the water in the same fortnight that 65 billion barrels went onto the books. Iran threatened a "more painful" response.

The president had described the conflict on Friday, at an Oval Office event, as "very successful," declining to call it a war. Rep. Mike Lawler, on Sunday: "Any time you are at war or in a military escalation, it is certainly not small potatoes. It is serious." By Tuesday oil was up again, after a top Iranian official said Tehran would impose an "exclusion zone" outside the Strait of Hormuz.

By Friday, September 11, the oil deal between the two nations was done. Fox News carried Wright's account of how a 30-minute military operation unlocked the Venezuela oil windfall for U.S. buyers, tapping 300 billion barrels of reserves to generate supply and cut prices. Thirty minutes is the labor line. The stake is majority control of 65 billion barrels, 35 percent of it held by the Pentagon, once the capture of the military took Nicolás Maduro and Cilia Flores out of Caracas, and Common Dreams reported on Friday, August 28 that Secretary of State Marco Rubio and Deputy White House Chief of Staff Stephen Miller were in talks with acting president Delcy Rodríguez over an ownership stake in more than a dozen oil fields. Whose column the gap turns up in is not a mystery. It is a line item at the Department of Defense.

People are on these books too. The New York Post reported that Venezuelan Vice President Delcy wants to be let out of jail, citing a heart ailment, while she and her husband await trial on U.S. drug trafficking charges; Workers World reported that protesters rallied outside the Metropolitan Detention Center on September 3, the ninth month in a row. That same Friday, the list of U.S.-designated foreign terrorist groups in Latin America reached 21.

So the fortnight closes: 65 billion barrels on the asset side, a record $4.15 at the pump on the price side, and the savings scheduled a year or two out. The barrels went somewhere. The money went somewhere. It did not go to the person holding the nozzle, but on Sunday, September 13, the president spoke with MBS, with the Strait of Hormuz still the primary flashpoint, and said everything will "work out fine."

WHAT HAPPENED. President Trump rejected Iran's seven-day offer to reopen the Strait of Hormuz and resume talks on September 27, 2026.

WHO GETS PAID. The receipts name no buyer yet.

WHAT SLIPS. The public's ability to get one straight reason for the rejection slips, as four administration officials gave four different justifications the same Sunday.

WHAT'S NEXT. If the war keeps driving up fuel prices, that is what happened at the White House on September 25, 2026, when the president signaled support for restricting diesel exports days after a senator called for an embargo.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

I have defended stranger positions than this one, but the record from three weeks back reads like four different men describing four different wars, and explaining it is the job I'm paid to do.

Start September 1. Bessent said Iran's economy could collapse "within weeks or months" under Operation Economic Fury. The next day the president ordered the largest wave of strikes yet against the Revolutionary Guard, told reporters the midterms would not move his timeline, and said it with his approval at a record-low 33 percent. Seven years earlier, in 2019, a different Iranian foreign minister said Trump's threats "won't end Iran" — the sentence could have been dated yesterday....

...(cont) Then Saturday happened. Iran put seven days on the table — reopen the Strait, halt attacks on shipping, come back to the nuclear file. The president rejected it, and told CBS he still expects the same talks to resume this week. Rejected the offer, expects the negotiation anyway.

Bessent gave the rejection a deadline instead of a reason: two weeks, and Iran will have "nothing left to trade," the last oil shipments to China already scheduled — proof the pressure campaign is working, is what I'm supposed to write next. Except a deadline announced the same weekend you reject the offer that would have ended the campaign isn't proof of anything except which day the last tanker leaves port, and it lands the same week the Times reports gas and diesel prices soaring, dragging Republicans down in the midterms Bessent's clock is racing against.

Waltz gave a different reason on the Sunday shows: Tehran asked for "everything up front," sanctions relief before signing anything. But if Iran runs out of things to trade in fourteen days by Bessent's own clock, "up front" was never a real ask to reject — it was the only clock in this administration two officials still agreed was running.

Araghchi called what comes next a "doomsday war" Iran says it's ready for, then by Sunday afternoon was asking Washington for clarification, saying the messaging has been contradictory enough that the rejection might not be final. He's right about the messaging. I'll say that plainly instead of hedging it.

On the same broadcast, Pezeshkian said the wrongfully detained Americans stay detained because "we tested it, and it didn't work," and that inspectors could come in, just not under the framework Washington built after leaving the 2015 deal. That outline looks like the start of the same deal Bessent's deadline is supposedly there to prevent.

Rep. Himes said the Iranians now control what happens on Election Day. I wrote that down too. Then I wrote down that four officials gave four different reasons for one decision inside forty-eight hours, and a count like that is harder to explain away than any single excuse sitting inside it.

FROM THE CORNER
Dutch

IRAN PUT SEVEN DAYS ON THE TABLE TO REOPEN THE STRAIT AND RETURN TO TALKS; the president rejected it and told CBS he still expects those same talks to resume this week. His Treasury secretary called the rejection a two-week clock on Iran's last oil sale, and his U.N. ambassador called the same rejection punishment for Iran asking for relief before it signed anything — two administration men reading two different verdicts off one decision, and neither reads it as a mistake. Because the clock runs while the war runs, and the war didn't pause for the midterms either, the number on pump six keeps climbing every Tuesday you fill up between now and the day Bessent says Iran has nothing left to sell.

"Four officials, four different reasons for saying no to the same seven-day offer, and each version still ends with the war running past the midterms Trump already said it would. Bessent's two-week deadline isn't strategy, it's a receipt for how many more weeks they need diesel prices high before people vote. They can't keep the excuse straight from one Sunday show to the next, and the price at the pump doesn't care which excuse you believe."
— Sal

"Look, the offer wasn't real leverage — Iran wanted sanctions relief before signing anything, and Waltz already said that's what happened, "everything up front," so this isn't spin, this is just what they asked for. Treasury's two-week thing is a shipping schedule, not a threat, oil contracts run on calendars — okay, it is functioning as a threat, but it's a scheduled threat, which I promise sounds better in the room than it does out loud."

Nineteen states vote to keep mornings dark for schoolkids, no one polls the schoolkids

By MORT
THE RECORDS BUREAU

"19 states approved permanent daylight saving time. The last obstacle to locking their clocks could soon fall", 20 September 2026 (PHOTO VIA THE HILL — THE ORIGINAL REPORT)

■ THE SHORT VERSION

typed by Dot

WHAT HAPPENED. State legislatures passed laws locking their clocks on daylight time permanently, pending a federal signoff.

WHO GETS PAID. The receipts name no buyer yet.

WHAT SLIPS. No school board, parent group, or public hearing got a vote before state legislatures locked in the change.

WHAT'S NEXT. Clocks fall back again this November as scheduled; the federal action needed to make the state laws take effect has not had a vote.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

Standard time, the twice-yearly agreement that a clock in November means something different than one in June, is dead. It was killed this month by legislative accretion: nineteen state governments have signed statutes locking their clocks onto daylight time year-round, each one waiting only on the single federal switch that has not yet been thrown. The Hill counted the states at nineteen on September 20 and reported the same count three days later, this time turning to a plainer question: what happens to a child waiting at a bus stop in the dark.

The answer arrived without ceremony, in the same dispatch that asked the question. That finding sat one paragraph away from the Senate's own position, reported in the same article: the chamber is not ready to make the leap, and school hours are the reason given. Cause and reluctance, printed side by side in one story, no separate hearing required to connect them — which is its own kind of bunk, calling a documented finding a last-minute snag....

...(cont) It is preceded in death, in each of those statehouses, by the twice-annual ritual of changing the clocks at all — a ritual retired at the state level before Washington acted on it, or against it.

The Washington Examiner reported on September 23 that this autumn still brings the same shift on schedule: nearly all Americans will set their clocks back an hour in November, the nineteen state statutes not yet in force. Standard time, then, is not being repealed. It is being outvoted in advance, state by state, waiting on one federal signature to make nineteen local decisions the law of the land.

In lieu of flowers, a single hearing — anywhere, before any of the nineteen statutes take effect — that puts the question on the record: what time does the sun come up for a child walking to school, and was that hour ever weighed against the convenience of an evening with more light in it.

"Nineteen states locked in darker mornings for the kid at the bus stop before one hearing asked about the kid at the bus stop. The Senate's excuse and the school-hours warning ran in the same article — that's not caution, that's a talking point somebody already had sitting in a drawer. Question is whose kid gets weighed against whose convenience, and right now the convenience is winning nineteen to zero."

— Sal

"This is bipartisan, sunshine for everybody, better mood, more retail hours — did I say retail, I meant family time. And the school thing, look, kids adjust, we've been changing clocks forever, that's just — okay, we're currently trying to stop changing them, forget I said that."

THE RECEIPTS

19 states approved permanent daylight saving time. The last obstacle to locking their clocks could soon fall

The Hill MAINSTREAM § 11:00 EDT

The U.S. appears close to observing permanent daylight saving time. It's something more than a dozen states have been waiting for.

Nineteen states have approved permanent daylight saving time. What does that mean for the clocks this year?

Washington Examiner RIGHT § 15:52 EDT

Autumn marks the return of cooler weather and cozy, short days. It also means nearly all Americans will soon shift their clocks back an hour in November, marking the months of early sunsets. The debate over daylight saving time has taken on a new dimension in recent years, with lawmakers in Washington and state capitals [...]

Permanent daylight saving time: How would your state be impacted?

The Hill MAINSTREAM § 11:01 EDT

Winters would look much different if our clocks were to lock.

Permanent daylight saving time? Schools and students would suffer, experts say

The Hill MAINSTREAM § 14:48 EDT

A major hurdle stands in the way of permanent daylight saving time: schools. Despite momentum from the White House, lawmakers in the lower chamber and nearly 20 states to stop switching the clocks, the Senate does not seem ready to make the leap — largely because of how schools would be affected by the change....
