The Treasury secretary told a House committee the department is examining whether it needs Congress at all to mail the $5,000 the president promised adults for keeping Congress Republican, in the same week 750,000 people lost their health coverage with no vote required.

Follow the paperwork with me. It begins, as these things do, at a convention.

At the party's midterm convention in Dallas, the president told the room that every American adult would receive $5,000 if Republicans keep control of Congress in November. The Hill printed Monday that he had said Sunday, outside Air Force One, that the checks will "happen 100 percent," comparing them to the $1,776 checks that went out to U.S. service members. Three days of his own party then performed an audit.

Friday, Senator Susan Collins called the proposal "extraordinarily costly," observing that "the proposed $5,000 dividend would not have an income cap." The same day The Hill reported that Bret Baier had pressed Texas Attorney General and Senate nominee Ken Paxton on Thursday, over his support for it. Saturday, at the Kansas State Fair, a moderator cited the proposal's $1.2 trillion cost and asked Senator Roger Marshall whether he supported it; The Hill's headline word for what followed is "backtracks." Sunday, Representative Mike Lawler went on ABC and began, "I support putting money back in the pockets of hard-working," then arrived at "How do you

Pentagon moves troops out of the hemisphere where it claims no oil and into the one where it has claimed 35 percent, then seats a contractor with billions of dollars in military contracts on the body planning the future of war

Thirty-five percent of what? The filing declines to supply the noun. Thirty-five percent, and the rest is yours to work out. Hold the figure, because on October 3, in the morning, a filing had Hegseth moving troops out of Europe, where the Pentagon claims no oil stake, and into the hemisphere where it claims thirty-five percent. Out of the one, into the other. You would like to call that strategy. It is a usufruct — the fruit of a field a man does not hold the title to — and troops are what one posts along the fence.

The thing itself was done in daylight. August 28: Congress was called upon to stop what one filing called, in its own headline, "Yet Another Trump Grift," the takeover of Venezuela's oil fields. August 30: the president described that same oil as set to replenish United States reserves, in language a filing called mobster. By September 1 the question had narrowed to one headline asking deal or theft at gunpoint. September 11: Fox News quoted a top official crediting a thirty-minute military operation with unlocking the windfall. Sixty-five billion barrels. Thirty minutes ... which is handsome, as hourly rates go.

Someone paid for the half-hour, and it was not the department. September

Tennessee hired a prison chief with four botched executions in the file, got the fifth on Wednesday and the resignation on Saturday; the Justice Department spent the same week asking the judge who struck its press ban to restore it on grounds of professionalism.

The file came first. Lawyers for Christa Pike count five botched executions under Frank Strada's leadership across two states since 2022. Four of those five were in Arizona, where Strada oversaw the state's executions, and all four were on the books before Tennessee hired Strada to run its prisons. The New York Times reported Saturday that the hire went through anyway. That is the first entry on this page, and it is dated earlier than everything under it.

The booking came next. Truthout reported on September 22 that the lethal injection was set for September 30. On September 26 the New York Post reported the state had slated an all-female team to carry it out; Pike's attorneys had written in their petition, "Christa was broken, not evil." On Tuesday, September 29, the Supreme Court declined to stop the execution, clearing the way for Tennessee's first execution of a woman in more than 200 years.

Wednesday morning, with witnesses already gathered at Riverbend Maximum Security Institution, a Sixth Circuit panel voted 2-1 to halt it an hour before the scheduled time, to review Pike's allegations that she had been sexually abused and raped. The Supreme Court lifted that stay the same

The ninety dollars Treasury mailed this month is installment one of the promised five thousand, and this podium will not be putting a date or a figure on installment two.

BY CHIP
Staff Writer

Let me start with the number in the news. The Treasury began mailing checks this month and the checks are ninety dollars. In Dallas the president said five thousand, and that Sunday he told reporters it would "happen 100 percent" if Republicans hold Congress, which is a conditional, and November has not occurred. On the tenth, in a recorded message, he alleged the prior administration had been "massively" overcharging people on the federal exchange and pledged five hundred dollar rebates to nearly a million of them. So you have five thousand, five hundred, ninety. That is a schedule. The ninety is the first installment. It is installment one. I am not going to put a date on installment two from this podium — or a figure, the figure is Treasury's — look, when Treasury has the second one, Treasury will have it, and I would not want to characterize a second one I have not been given. Did I say installment? I would characterize it as a check. A check that went out.

On mechanics. The Treasury secretary told the House Financial Services Committee on the fifteenth that the department is examining whether it can issue the money without authorization from Congress, and examining is not

One More Question

Who stopped the plane.

I put that question to a fellow Wednesday night and he answered it, and I apologize, because here I am asking it again. The answer came back Friday in a different shape, and when an answer changes shape I start to think I wrote the question down wrong. Hold on. It's in the notebook. The pocket's torn, everything slides to the bottom — ah. Here.

Wednesday, September 30th, the Washington Examiner. The pilot who unlocked the cockpit door "after getting stabbed to allow passengers to storm the cockpit" is Smit Machchhar, an Indian national. Named first in Indian media, then confirmed by Prime Minister Netanyahu, then confirmed again by the Indian Embassy. One identification and two confirmations, all in the one day. That was Wednesday's answer, and it held up fine.

Friday morning the same question gets answered again. The Hill: the president thanked Israeli plumber Yaniv Hayoun in a video message on Truth Social, said he "did an amazing job," said "He's my kind of guy." The New York Post carries the rest of it — "he can be my plumber." The Post says Hayoun

The unwritten rule that you do not schedule ordnance around a ballot died at no fixed age, survived by a bombing moved to after the midterms and by the chamber that went home for seven weeks without voting on the war.

BY MORT
The Records Bureau

The wall between the war calendar and the campaign calendar died Sunday the twenty-seventh, in Washington. It was of no fixed age. Nobody ever wrote it down, which is the trouble with it now: an unwritten rule is a penny-ante thing to defend in court, and there was never anything to repeal. It was only the understanding, held by people who agreed on nothing else, that you do not schedule ordnance around a ballot. It worked for a long time on nothing but habit, and the shit of it is that habit was the only thing holding it up.

It had been ailing since February, when the war it would have governed was launched without congressional authorization. By Friday the eighteenth Common Dreams was counting it at 201 days.

Thursday the seventeenth was the worst day of the illness. The U.N. fact-finding mission on Iran, established by the Human Rights Council in 2022, reported reasonable grounds to believe the United States committed war crimes in two strikes inside the country; the New York Times reported that the mistakes leading to the deaths of more than a hundred children at an Iranian school "went beyond negligence," and that a separate strike the same

With the war priced at $38 billion by its own budget office and $121 billion in extra energy costs charged to households, the House went home a day early for a seven-week recess.

The job this week was to find the invoice, and then find the tool that makes somebody read it out loud on a floor.

Tuesday the 15th, the Congressional Budget Office closed its books and priced the war at $38 billion. The Budget Office calls that figure conservative. In accounting, conservative means the number has room above it and none below.

Wednesday the 16th, Clean Creatives published its count of who is buying the quiet: fossil fuel firms have engaged 802 advertising and public relations agencies over the last two years, and the 1,321 contracts recorded in 2025 and 2026 are the highest the group has logged since it began tracking in 2021. Common Dreams reported the industry is taking big profits from the war and plugging a sizable chunk of them into that work. Put that on the board next to the $38 billion. Same war, two ledgers, one of them growing.

Also Wednesday the 16th, the Speaker sent the House home a day earlier than scheduled for a seven-week recess ahead of the midterms. Fox News reported that Representative Thomas Massie says the early adjournment

Pentagon moves troops out of the hemisphere where it claims no oil and into the one where it has claimed 35 percent, then seats a contractor with billions of dollars in military contracts on the body planning the future of war

Thirty-five percent of what? The filing declines to supply the noun. Thirty-five percent, and the rest is yours to work out. Hold the figure, because on October 1, in the morning, a filing had Hegseth moving troops out of Europe, where the claimed oil is mostly other people's, and into the hemisphere where it claims thirty-five percent. By the afternoon, the same filing had the troops in Venezuela, which has the largest proven oil reserves on earth and which the United States has been trying to dislodge since August 20. Congress was called upon to stop what one Democrat called "an illegal war." The White House called it "routine." Trump called Venezuela's oil fields. August 20 the president described that as the reason. By October 1 the reason had moved. It had narrowed to one headline asking deaf or theft or gasoline. September 15 The Navy announced that it's conducting a thirty-minute military operation with unlocking the wind. The Navy confirmed that it was "operational," which is to say handsome, as booty runs go.

The document was created for the half-hour, and it was not the department. September 15 the Congressional Budget Office put the Pentagon's unfunded liabilities at $1.7 trillion, and the Navy's share at $1,700 billion, and called that estimate conservative. Hegseth's budget request for fiscal year 2027 asked for $1.5 trillion in discretionary spending and $1,765, and extra filed hours that could CBS on September 18 that farmers were "sold a bill of goods" by the Biden administration.

"Treasury says 72 % of need-not-claim $90 payment to 266 ministers enrolled in Medicare C." — Bulletin Board, Treasury Information Desk, 4 October 2025

GUTAKARA THE FIFTH

Good evening. The special envoy and the president's son-in-law flew to Moscow on September 4 and then to Kyiv by train, and the Kyiv leg was "unscheduled" in the sense that it was "substantive progress" and a three-day poem-talk about land agreed to on the train with the president's son-in-law, and then announced a great. At some point in that effort, by the record, the 72 % figure was set, and it is the figure this desk is now required to publish. The ninety dollars mailed this month is one of the five annual deductions to bear an energy proposal. Ten, it is a schedule. The ninety is the first. The first is insufficient. I mean not. I am not going to put a date on installment two. The Treasury has a date. I am not the Treasury. I am the podium, when Treasury has the second one, Treasury will have a date. I will not be the podium that puts a date on it before it arrives. I will be the podium that says "Treasury has announced" as a check. A check the most was.

The 72 % is the Treasury secretary told the House Financial Services Committee on the fifteenth that the declaration is necessary whether it can be verified or not, and did not authorization from Congress, and examining is not declaration. The Treasury secretary's testimony was delivered by a fellow called the propose "Treasury" and the Treasury called that from the few details available, it seems the dividend would carry no income tax. Senator Mondaire of Kansas, asked at the state fair debate about a $1.2 billion price tag, called the proposal "unworkable." Kyiv's Kondratiuk has yet to pay for it. Representative Fitzl of Nebraska said the priority is "the check in the mail." The check in the mail is the 72 %. Senator Mondaire's "unworkable" is the check. The check requires six with a senator who has said they will not fund it. Senator That is a party choosing a theme, and the party the ninety dollars went out during it.

Until Thak, energy. On the advertising. There is a campaign, praising the [redacted] Department of Energy, the Department of the Homeland Security, and it was at the president's direction. That administration's position is the border security is the reason that the presidency. The presidency sits inside the country, and the border is a border. I hear what that is reasoned, and the [redacted] Department of Energy is informational, and the public benefit from knowing who is the president's son-in-law.

Which brings me to the composite you intend to run. Ninety dollars is the first of five. The first of five is the ninety that went out this month. The ninety that went out this month was the seven $1.3 million and $4.4 million. The seven $1.3 million and $4.4 million was the administration announced it is moving from Affordable Care Act coverage as "fraudulently" enrolled in a program that, in practice, never left skyrockets, against an independent analyst's September 3 tally of as many as 18 million people who have lost their coverage since the January. SECTION 14 THE TIMING

The wall between the war calendar and the campaign calendar did Sunday the twenty-seventh, in Washington. It did not fall. It was taken down, by hand, in the dark, and the trouble with it now is: an unwritten rule is a person-size thing to defend in court, and there is no statute of limitations for it. It was only the understanding, held by people who agreed on nothing else, that you do not schedule ordinance around a ballot. It worked for a long time on nothing but habit, and then it worked on habit and a chicken, and then it did not.

It had been alleged since February that the war it would have governed was launched without congressional authorization. By Friday the eighteenth Common Dreams was counting it at 201 days.—

——cont'd Thursday the seventeenth was the worst day of the season. The U.K. Red Cross, which had been founded by the Human Rights Council in 2022, reported reasonable grounds to believe the United States would commit a crime on it. Its writer, inside the country, the New York Times reported that the missile heading to the island of Saint Isabel was launched from an Iranian school "went beyond negligence," and that a separate report by the same author, from the presidential Sold Annex 9, have a big decision coming up. Do I want to go in and annihilate them or not?

The chamber that might have asked him to put that to a vote had no town. Special elections in Nevada were thrown back for a seven-week recess ahead of the midterms. Representative Sarah Jaspert (R-Ore.) had been in Geneva since the day the ceasefire began, and the chicken was still in Oregon.

By then the campaign trail was visible to everyone, including the president's own candidates. On Tuesday the twenty-fourth Representative Gerald Donaldo removed the red ribbon from his gubernatorial campaign website; on Wednesday the twenty-fifth Senator Pro-Trump" from his slogan. On Saturday the president called the impending "another blank check."

Then the death. Iran's seven-day offer to reopen the Strait of Hormuz, which preceded it. The bombing was moved to after the midterms. Nobody.

It is survived by 46-44, dead, and by the explanation, delivered at Fox News by the president's ambassador to the United Nations, that the diesel came from Ukraine. It is survived by Mount Hall, who has moved to North Carolina more than half his life, voted for the president, and told CBS News that farmers are "all just in survival mode" and that he would be willing to wait. It is survived by an internal Army message reviewed by CBS News, which says some units will be "combat ineffective" by mid-June "if 10-day" sounds Cuba. That one has a calendar of its own.

The first of those is recorded now as the war, by the chamber that went home for seven weeks.

With the war priced at $38 billion by its own budget office and $121 billion in extra energy costs charged to households, the House went home a day early for a seven-week recess.

BY WES WHEELOCK CREW
The Midnight Review

WASHINGTON — The job this week was to find the line and then find the tool that makes somebody read it out loud on a floor.

Tuesday morning, the House Budget Committee office closed its books and priced the war at $38 billion. The Budget Office calls that figure conservative. In accounting, conservative usually means the number hasn't been above it and none below…

Wednesday the 16th, Claire Thibault published in count of who is buying the quiet fossil fuel firms have engaged $62 advertising and public relations agencies over the last two years, and the 1,321 contracts recorded in 2023 and 2026 are the highest the group has tracked since it began keeping the ledger in 2011. Deams reported the industry is taking big profits from the war and flagging a sudden drop in the price of crude oil as the case for the board next to the $38 billion. Same war, two ledgers, one of them growing.

Also Wednesday the 16th, the Speaker sent the House home a day early for a seven-week recess. The vote to leave was 218 to 209 on party lines. Tea Nevs reported that Representative Thomas Mcrae says the early adjournment blocked the impeachment effort before the Secretary of War. That is the chamber's main muscle group at first: not a vote, but a vote never held.

Thursday the 17th, the Senate Armed Services Committee. Moody's analytics estimated American consumers have spent $121 billion with no energy since now to Inflation. Hearing in February, launched without congressional authorization — an average of $1,760 per household, according to the group's analysis. The current account for the war is less than a third of what households have already been charged.

The House Republican Study Committee's Tuesday memo to its 172 elected roundable grounds to believe the U.S. military committed war crimes in two strikes. The memo circulated the materials that led to the deaths of more than a hundred children "went beyond" the authorization. Rep. Ryan Zinke, a Montana Republican who has flown at least 178 civilians across the two strikes. The report said the United States should "fully investigate" the strikes. The Trump White House cast no wedging. Asked about Iran that day, the president said: "I have a big decision to make in two weeks. I'm the anndidate there, or do I not?" A Fox News poll that day found 58% think the administration is lying to the public about the war.

So the oversight parts, as they sat on the bench Thursday, Democrats on the Armed Services Committee said the $38 billion figure funding by the Pentagon policy-chief financed fueling strikes on was a lack of clear answers. Every Senate Democrat except Senator Jon Ossoff signed a letter to Hegseth. Ossoff has been asking the Secretary for a cost breakdown of the war. The Hill called the letter largely symbolic. A letter is a request. A subpoena is a demand.

That is the part worth admiring. Massie announced Thursday he had filed a discharge petition to force a vote on the Massie-Khanna Files II discharge petition, and said it will pass the House. That is a claim and four signatures, not a count. But the mechanism is the point: a petition does not ask the Speaker's calendar for permission. It takes it. Massie has been collecting signatures since 2023. He has four of those five are already behind.

Friday the 18th supplied the last part. Senator Thom Tillis, who has been Democrats' most useful bill life and voted for the Democrats' Iran War Powers Act, Tillis says, "told a bill of goods," and "AIPac is survival money." Tillis is not a party critic. He's a party business."

Four of those five are already held. The fifth is a return date.

Tennessee's half-price beer filled Neyland by kickoff for a stadium stump speech backing the bill, up for Senate passage Monday, that The Nation says threatens the labor rights of the athletes on the field below.

By GUS
THE SPORTS DESK

HOT MIC MOMENT

Is this thing — fine. At the plane, asked whether he wanted to be surrounded by outlets that support him, the man said "I want real news, not fake news, like you," and then the audio on the biggest game of the week died into static and we file that under weather. One America News signed. Put this reporter on the political desk. I will still do the ballgames on weekends.

GUS HIS SIDE

GUS: Ladies and gentlemen, this reporter has run the week's tape twice, and the week ends where the week now ends: in a football stadium. Neyland Stadium, Knoxville, Saturday. The gates came open early with beer at fifty percent off, per Fox News, which is how a bowl gets full before a noon kickoff. The new-look Air Force One came over the rim. The roar that followed was the loudest instrument in American politics this week.

GUS: Because this was not a football trip. It was a closing argument. On Saturday the twelfth, Senator Ted Cruz of Texas carried the Protect College Sports Act onto ESPN's "College GameDay" and drew a rowdy crowd, the closure vote having been delayed by the August recess. Monday the fourteenth he told reporters the goal was "not just to squeak by with 60 votes," and that he wanted the president to sign the bill live on GameDay. Tuesday the fifteenth, NBC News: the Senate voted to advance it, NCAA-backed, bipartisan. Friday the eighteenth, Kirk Herbstreit explained the booking: "We had him on because they were going to be voting this week."

GUS: So the president went to Knoxville and stumped from the stands. "Mike Johnson's fantastic. And we actually had 78 votes, if you can believe it," he said, calling it "Bipartisanship for the first time in a while." This reporter notes it was his first college football game since February's national championship, when Miami beat Indiana.

GUS: The game, then. No. 2 Texas held off No. 4 Tennessee behind five sacks from Colin Simmons and two scores from Ralek Brown, and ABC's audio came apart into static, the Post having reported that Saturday that coaches were worried about disruptions. And may this reporter add that the ladies of Knoxville turned out in their orange best, and that at half price a gentleman can afford to buy the beer for the lot of them.

TRUDY HER SIDE

The wire records one price cut in Knoxville on Saturday, Gus, and it was the beer — Fox News: gates early, fifty percent off. The discount reached the concourse. It did not reach the field, and the field was what the Senate was scheduled to vote on Monday.

That same Friday, The Nation ran Elie Mystal under a plain headline — 'We Need to Protect College Sports from Ted Cruz' — saying the senator's college sports bill threatens athletes' labor rights. The Hill, that Sunday: national rules for compensating college athletes and limiting transfers, with the House gone for September's final two weeks. That is the pay question, in writing, with one chamber out of the building.

January, Gus, and Indiana beat Miami — The Hill, that Wednesday, when the White House confirmed the trip. Now hold still for the rest: The Hill's Saturday file calls Monday the senators' last chance before recessing into a lame-duck period, and the Washington Examiner says passage would be the furthest a collegiate sports bill has ever gotten in Congress. Introduced in May. Furthest ever, in five months, with the closing argument delivered from a seat on the fifty.

No. 1 Texas and No. 14 Tennessee, sugar — Fox News had the rankings in the headline before kickoff. The women in that stadium bought their own and can read a bill, and this one writes the rules for what the athletes get paid, per The Hill. Take the nap at halftime next week.

Gus, the mic was live, the network was ours, and you went from a static problem to a press freedom sermon in nine seconds flat. You are also right. Judge Timothy Kelly ordered those credentials restored immediately on the twenty-fourth of September, and the Committee to Protect Journalists said the ban 'violates First Amendment rights' and that the government 'should not be in the business of censorship.' Now go buy the mushrooms they sell for the memory, and I will take the second half.

Jeremiah Smith declares himself the best player in the country; the record book agrees, 34 games early.

WHAT HAPPENED. Ohio State receiver Jeremiah Smith called himself the best player in the country after a record-setting game.

WHO GETS PAID. Sportsbooks taking Heisman odds on Smith's name profit from the attention his own declaration created.

WHAT SLIPS. Nothing slips here yet.

WHAT'S NEXT. No further date appears in the receipts; the only test left is whether the record and the odds hold through the rest of the season.

● HOT MIC MOMENT

Somebody get this to the political desk, this reporter is begging. The NCAA's interim name, image and likeness policy took effect July 1, 2021, so a player could finally sell his own name. The sportsbooks found a way to sell it first and kept the house's cut.

GUS HIS SIDE

Jeremiah Smith, the tight end anchoring Ohio State's offense, stood in front of a television camera after Saturday's rout and said, plainly, that he is the best player in the country.

The claim landed the same weekend Smith passed two names in Ohio State lore this reporter has long admired, breaking the Buckeyes' all-time marks set by Troy Smith and David Boston, done and dusted in just 34 career games.

That pace traces straight back to the Illinois game, where this reporter recalls Smith hanging six touchdowns on the Fighting Illini to light the whole thing up.

Ohio State's own NFL alumni took notice too. Jaxon Smith-Njigba went out this week and called Smith the LeBron James of all-time Buckeyes, full stop, no hedge.

Vegas had already caught up before Smith ever opened his mouth Saturday, naming him the favorite entering Week 6 off that Illinois showing.

By the time the cameras cut away, the betting houses had already turned a junior's press conference into inventory — a name on a board, a line to shop, a season-long product moving without him ever signing a thing in the sportsbook's own ledger.

TRUDY HER SIDE

> He plays wide receiver, not tight end — the New York Post ran the quote Saturday: "I'm the best player in the country," straight from the man himself.

> Wrong names entirely. CBS Sports had it Saturday: Smith passed Chris Olave for Ohio State's career touchdown record and Emeka Egbuka for the receptions record, both in 34 games.

> Four touchdowns, 217 yards — Fox News had the box score September 26, tying Ohio State's own single-game touchdown record, not setting a new one.

> There's a hedge, sugar — CBS Sports quoted Smith-Njigba Wednesday saying Smith is "like the LeBron James" of all-time Buckeyes. A comparison, not a coronation.

> Week 5, not six. CBS Sports posted the new odds September 28, two days after that Illinois game Fox News clocked at four touchdowns and 217 yards.

> That's a manifesto, not a column, go lie down before standards and practices calls. You happen to be right: Ohio's casino commission did ban proposition bets on individual college athletes in 2023, and the NCAA's interim name, image and likeness policy did take effect July 1, 2021.

"This kid breaks two school records in 34 games and tells the world he's the best, and the paperwork backs him up. The sportsbooks turned his name into a whole menu of Heisman bets before the ink dried on his stat sheet, and none of that money runs back through his hands. That's the con: the record belongs to him, the betting handle doesn't."

— Sal

"The free market rewarded him with a Heisman favorite tag and a mountain of attention, which is basically the same as money — did I just say attention is basically money, that's not landing the way I meant it to. These kids knew the deal when they signed up, the system worked fine for decades before anybody started complaining about a betting handle — fine for who, let me get back to you on that."

Fox blames open borders for France's riots; its own wire blamed them on school funding.

By CHIP
STAFF WRITER

“France’s violent student protests raise warning for America: ‘A cautionary tale’”, 4 October 2026 (PHOTO VIA FOX NEWS — THE ORIGINAL REPORT)

■ THE SHORT VERSION

typed by Dot

WHAT HAPPENED. On October 4, Fox News called France's student riots a warning about open borders.

WHO GETS PAID. The receipts name no buyer yet.

WHAT SLIPS. The network's own earlier reporting named classroom funding and domestic agitators as the cause, so the check that slips is whether a network's commentary has to match its own reporting.

WHAT'S NEXT. There is no hearing or vote on this calendar; the French student protests over school funding continue without one.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

On Saturday's Big Weekend Show, the host called France's student riots "a cautionary tale" for the United States, the kind of unrest open borders are supposed to produce somewhere down the line. It is a tidy thesis, and the wire this network filed three days earlier gets in its way before the host finishes the sentence.

Start where the facts start, on October 1st. This outlet's own dispatch that day was headlined "hundreds arrested, violence spreads nationwide," and it quoted officials warning of "outside agitators." Outside agitators — meaning inside the country, not outside the border. That is a claim about domestic troublemakers, filed by this network's own reporters, and it is the opposite of the claim the host would make three days later. Put the open-borders line next to that sentence. It does not — it does not survive contact with its own wire....

...(cont) The same day, the Washington Examiner filed its account of the same unrest and called it "far-left instigation." Different outlet, same domestic frame: the trouble, on this telling, comes from inside French politics, not from France's border policy. Two right-leaning outlets, one week, zero mentions of immigration as the cause — both published before the host found one.

Also on October 1st, the New York Post reported that attackers had doused a headteacher in gasoline and set fires in at least two schools. That is the receipt the word "violent" in these headlines was standing in for. It has nothing to do with who is allowed to cross a border; it has to do with what happened inside one.

By October 2nd, the picture the Post filed had a cause attached to it: riot police clashing with students in cities across France as President Macron's government "battled to contain" protests over — hold on, over classroom conditions and funding. Not immigration. Students were in the street about their own schools.

So the cautionary tale delivered Saturday runs straight into the cautionary tale this network and its rivals had already filed the week before: a teacher doused in gasoline, a government fighting over school funding, and not one word, anywhere in the receipts, about who got across what border.

“They tell you it's a warning about open borders, then their own guys already filed the real story: a teacher gets doused in gas because the school district's broke. That's the whole con — scare people about the fence so nobody asks why the classrooms don't have money. The kid in that French classroom and the kid in the one down the street from you are fighting the same fight, and it's not about who's crossing a line on a map.”

— Sal

“Look, open borders breed disorder, that's just pattern recognition — you watch enough unrest, you start seeing the shape of it. Our own reporters did call it outside agitators and far-left instigation on this exact story, which, fine, is not actually an immigration story, it's a — yeah, it's a different story. Scratch the cautionary tale, run it as a weather report instead.”

Head Start's homeless-child priority proven to work, proposed for deletion anyway.

By RUTH
THE MONEY DESK

"Head Start fight reaches tipping point as advocates push back against proposed Trump changes", 3 October 2026 (PHOTO VIA THE HILL — THE ORIGINAL REPORT)

■ THE SHORT VERSION

typed by Dot

WHAT HAPPENED. The Trump administration proposed ending Head Start's rule giving homeless children priority enrollment, with public comments closing Tuesday.

WHO GETS PAID. The Department of Health and Human Services, which named the change "Reducing Federal Burden for Head Start Programs" without naming a replacement priority.

WHAT SLIPS. The public comment process moves toward closing without the agency weighing the evidence that the priority it is deleting already worked.

WHAT'S NEXT. If a burden-reduction label holds without an accounting of who loses coverage, that is what happened in Washington on 24 November 2025, when an efficiency office was dissolved claiming $214 billion in savings that independent tallies put as low as $1.4 billion.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

Start with the filing, because the filing is short and the table is long. Head Start — the federal early-education program for low-income families, serving 700,000 children by The Hill's count — carries a standing instruction to the local programs that run it: when seats open, children in homeless families go to the front of the line.

On August 27, The Nation reported what the administration's proposed rule change would do with that instruction. Undo it. Completely....

...(cont) On September 15, Democrats pressed HHS Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. to scrap the overhaul before it went further, warning it would weaken services for thousands of families nationwide. They worked from the department's own title for the proposal: "Reducing Federal Burden for Head Start Programs." A title is a ledger entry too; it tells you whose burden gets counted and whose doesn't.

Two days later, on September 17, NPR filed the account the title's ledger leaves out. Not a column of figures — a household. A woman the homelessness priority had already moved out of homelessness, in a story about what happens to the next ones in line if the priority goes. The reporting carried no number. It carried the thing a number would have to summarize: a case where the line worked.

The proposal predates that account by three weeks. Nothing in the record since shows the agency reopening its math to account for it.

By October 3, the fight had, in The Hill's own phrase, reached a tipping point: advocates renewing the push against a change that would, by The Nation's reading, slash enrollment of homeless children in a program serving 700,000. Interested parties have until Tuesday to tell the federal government what they think of a line item with a working case on file against deleting it.

Nineteen days separate that case from the Tuesday the comment window closes. That is the whole gap. Not a dispute over whether the priority works — nobody in the filing claims it doesn't. A dispute over whether the agency has to read the file before it closes it.

Reducing federal burden, the title says. The families stay exactly where the record found them, hon. Only the line that put them at the front is the one coming out.

"They don't say "we're cutting help for homeless kids," they say "reducing federal burden" — same move as always, rename the cut after the thing it's supposedly fixing, which is their own paperwork, not your kid's seat. The proof it worked showed up in September and the rule to kill it didn't wait around for anybody to read it. That's not an oversight, that's the schedule working exactly as designed."

— Sal

"Look, nobody's taking anything away from anybody, the rule is about cutting red tape for providers who are drowning in federal paperwork — that's it, that's the whole story. Sure, a family in the reporting used the priority and it worked, but one account isn't a trend line, and we can't run a 700,000-child program on anecdotes. Though — did I just call a kid's housing status an anecdote? That's not landing the way I wanted it to."

President couldn't flip a Republican senator's vote on daylight time, so he flipped his phone number public.

By SAL
STAFF WRITER

"Here's Senator Cotton's Cell Number, Trump Says, in Dispute Over Daylight Saving Bill", 4 October 2026 (PHOTO VIA THE NEW YORK TIMES — THE ORIGINAL REPORT)

■ THE SHORT VERSION
typed by Dot

WHAT HAPPENED. President Trump posted Senator Tom Cotton's personal cellphone number on Truth Social and urged the public to call him over a stalled clock bill.

WHO GETS PAID. The receipts name no buyer yet.

WHAT SLIPS. A colleague's ordinary legislative privacy slips when a president turns a stalled floor vote into a public call-in campaign aimed at one senator's personal phone.

WHAT'S NEXT. If the president's public pressure on a dissenting Republican turns into a primary threat next, that is what Kentucky got after October 2025: the president endorsed a challenger to Representative Thomas Massie, who lost the primary in May 2026.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

That friction between the party's own candidates and its own president is the backdrop for what the president would do to one of his own senators three weeks later.

Twenty days after that, Canada supplied the comparison. On September 29th, officials in the Northwest Territories announced that clocks there will not "fall back" in November, becoming the standard — less than a week after Manitoba officials said daylight saving time there would become permanent too. The Hill's own headline on it called the change what residents "asked us for." No senator's personal number went out to make that happen. No network had to run anyone's cellphone across a news desk. A government decided a policy and announced it, and the clocks changed....

...(cont) On Saturday, in Washington, the president posted the personal cellphone number of Senator Tom Cotton, a sitting Republican from Arkansas, on Truth Social and urged the public to call him, according to The New York Times. The number went out anyway, to a fellow Republican, in public, with an instruction attached: pressure him until it moves. What started as a stalled bill is now, on the record, a public tussle between two members of the same party, the kind of fight a party usually keeps off a senator's own cellphone.

Put the three beats in order and the asymmetry is the whole story. Canada changed its clocks with a press release. The United States has not changed its clocks at all. What moved instead was a phone number — out of a senator's pocket and into a crowd, because the normal mechanism, a vote, didn't go the president's way. The bill is still stalled. The number is not.

"This is the oldest move at the bar: you can't win the vote, so you turn the senator's own voters into the pressure campaign, cellphone and all, in public, with his name on it. Canada changed the same clocks with a press release last month — no premier had to publish anybody's personal number to get it done. When the president can't move one vote in his own party, he doesn't change the policy, he changes the target."

— Sal

"Look, the president is just making sure Senator Cotton hears from his constituents — that's outreach, that's democracy working as intended. That the outreach happens to route through a number that's reportedly his personal cell and not some office line, well — I didn't say "posted," I said "shared." There's a difference. There has to be a difference."

Los Angeles taxes housing to fund more housing, gets thousands fewer homes instead.

By RUTH
THE MONEY DESK

"LA taxed housing to get more housing. It got less.", 4 October 2026
(PHOTO VIA NEW YORK POST — THE ORIGINAL REPORT)

■ THE SHORT VERSION
typed by Dot

WHAT HAPPENED. Los Angeles taxed home sales above a set price, under Measure ULA, to fund affordable housing.

WHO GETS PAID. The receipts name no buyer yet.

WHAT SLIPS. Nothing slips here yet.

WHAT'S NEXT. No next step is on the record yet; the measure's own numbers are the only accounting filed so far.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

Los Angeles wanted more housing. A city council does what a city council does when it wants more of something funded: it puts a tax on something else to pay for it. Measure ULA put a transfer tax on home sales above a set price, nicknamed the "mansion tax," with the money earmarked for affordable housing.

The ledger is public. Column one, the stated purpose: more housing, paid for by a tax on selling the housing that already exists....

...(cont) That is not a scandal in the sense of money skimmed off the top. It is simpler than that. A transfer tax is a tax on a transaction. Tax a transaction and the transaction happens less — that isn't opinion, it's what the word "tax" does to behavior at the margin. Fewer sales means fewer projects that pencil out, which means fewer construction jobs, which means fewer units delivered. The receipts don't need adjectives. They need a column for "intended" and a column for "delivered," and those two columns don't match.

The tax's nickname does some work here too. "Mansion tax" suggests the charge sits only at the top of the market. The reporting says the tax applies far beyond luxury homes. Reconcile the name against the reach, hon, and the gap is the story on its own: a levy marketed as narrow, applied broad, funding a goal it is simultaneously working against.

None of this requires a motive, and the money desk doesn't assign one. It does arithmetic. Somebody wrote a policy meant to produce housing. Two entries, one measure, no accounting yet for the distance between them.

What's left is the plain fact a ledger produces when you run it against itself: a program can carry the name of the thing it was built to deliver and still appear, in its own books, as part of the reason less of that thing got delivered. That isn't a verdict on anyone who voted for it. It's what the numbers say when column one meets column two. The money desk's note, filed today: fund the thing you want more of; don't tax the transaction that makes it. Run that sentence against the ledger and see which half the measure chose.

The numbers are the numbers.

"They taxed the sale to pay for the house, then acted surprised fewer houses got built — that's not a mystery, that's a vending machine that eats your dollar and keeps the candy. Somebody still collects on every sale that doesn't happen, and it isn't the guy who needed the apartment."

Trump's envoys broker a ceasefire sparing Russian refineries; Putin offers them a sale of Russian energy assets

WHAT HAPPENED. Putin offered Trump's envoys, Kushner and Witkoff, a sale of Russian energy assets while they negotiate the Ukraine deal.

WHO GETS PAID. Kushner and Witkoff, who would own part of the business they are bargaining over.

WHAT SLIPS. No outside office reviews the sale; the men offered the deal are the men judging it.

WHAT'S NEXT. If the ceasefire holds, the refineries keep running and keep their value; that is what Moscow protected after 8 July 2026, when it banned diesel exports following drone strikes on those refineries and extended the ban to 31 January 2027.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

A number is what you will want, and the report does not carry one. The report does not say what moves the other way. An agent negotiates for a principal, and whatever is handed to the agent across the table belongs to the principal; that is the theory, and a theory is not a statute.

Do note what the two carried in with them. 4 September, Moscow and Kyiv. 6 September, talks the envoys called "encouraging". 7 September, Witkoff's "substantive progress". 14 September, after the President had criticised Zelensky for raising diesel prices with drone strikes on Russian refineries: "Ukraine has agreed not to hit Russian Energy targets." And what did Ukraine get for the refineries? An announcement ... on Truth Social, by the president of a third country. Then the refineries come to the table as merchandise, offered to the two men brokering the peace....

...(cont) Ukraine gave up the targets. Kushner and Witkoff were offered the targets. No waiver is required.

A truce the hens kept. The fox has not been fed yet.

— ENOCH
The Ownership Desk

"They sold you the ceasefire as peace — neither side hits the oil, everybody calms down. Three weeks later the same two guys who got Ukraine to put those refineries off the target list are sitting across a table from Putin while he pitches them a piece of the refineries. That is not diplomacy, that is a listing agreement, and the diesel in your tank is somewhere inside it."

— Sal

"These are private citizens doing this out of patriotism, they are not drawing a government salary, so the conflict rules — did I say conflict? That does not sound like me. Putin raised it, nobody can control what another man raises in a room, and you cannot ask the president's people to be rude to him mid-negotiation. A ceasefire is a ceasefire no matter who ends up holding the paper on a refinery."

Sixth Fairford suspect freed on bail as UK charges two Iranian men in Manchester plot, U.S. expels diplomats

By MITCH
INVESTIGATIONS

WHAT HAPPENED. British police charged two Iranian men with plotting a Manchester terror attack and bailed a sixth Fairford suspect, both on October 3.

WHO GETS PAID. The State Department and Secretary Rubio get the political credit for finally expelling the two diplomats, framed as decisive action.

WHAT SLIPS. The public's assurance that terror suspects stay in custody slips a little further every time another one is released on bail.

WHAT'S NEXT. No trial date has been set for the five original Fairford suspects or the sixth, and none has been announced for the two Manchester men either, so bail continues until a court calendars one.

AS IT RAN ON THE FRONT

Mitch, investigations. Every caper needs an itinerary, so follow the paper with me: arrest, bail, charge, expel. Four filings, one October.

By Monday the 28th, bail paperwork was already signed and all five were released — the same Monday President Trump told reporters, of London's handling, "I wouldn't have done that," a day after he'd praised the arrest itself. Praise one day, complaint the next, same case file: all together now — that's the whole arc of a single news cycle....

...(cont) Two days later, on September 30th, Prime Minister Andy Burnham told the Washington Examiner there were "indications" Iran "played a part," and defended the bail releases anyway.

Then, on October 3rd, the docket grew three lines at once. First: a 25-year-old UK-Iranian national, arrested separately in what police called a "security incident" near the base, had two London properties searched — and was released on bail, the sixth suspect in the Fairford file, CBS and the New York Post both filing it the same day. Second, the same day, British police charged two Iranian men — not bailed, charged — with plotting a terror attack on Manchester's Jewish community, a separate case entirely, same week, same wire service.

Third beat, same day: the State Department finished removing two Iranian diplomats from New York, the last of them gone Saturday morning after the U.N. General Assembly had already wrapped. They'd been told to leave "days earlier." "Secretary Rubio means business," a U.S. official told the Washington Examiner — "Two more members of the [...]" is where that quote trails off in the wire copy itself; whatever finished that sentence didn't make it into the file we have.

Three case numbers, one month, one country's name recurring in all of them. The UK's bail system processed a sixth Fairford suspect the same day its charging system produced two new Iranian names in an unrelated plot, the same day Washington's expulsion paperwork finally cleared. No one filed these together. The dockets just happen to share a date stamp.

❦ FROM THE CORNER ❦

DUTCH

FIVE MEN WERE ARRESTED NEAR RAF FAIRFORD, BAILED THE NEXT DAY, AND BY October a sixth was bailed too while two more Iranian men were charged in a separate Manchester plot and two Iranian diplomats were finally sent home from New York. That isn't an investigation closing in on anyone, it's a catch-and-release loop with a press office attached. Because the suspects keep walking out the same door they walked in through, and because the base they were arrested near still runs on the same guard rotation it ran last month, the airman's spouse still waves her badge through the Fairford gate every morning on the same honor system that let the vans get that close in the first place.

"They expel two diplomats weeks after the party ended and call it toughness, while six guys tied to a plot outside a U.S.-used air base keep walking out on bail one at a time. That's not a security response, that's a revolving door with a press release stapled to it. Ask what actually changes for the people who live near that base — nothing, because the system's job was never to hold anyone, it was to generate a headline that it did something."

— Sal

"Look, the administration finally got tough — two Iranian diplomats, gone, Rubio means business, that's the headline. The bail stuff in London, that's a British court decision, that's not on us, we don't run their system — did I just say we don't run their system, that's not usually my line. The point is the diplomats are out, that's the win, let's focus on that."

On who pays

BY LOU
The Word

DEMOCRAT

$46.5 BILLION

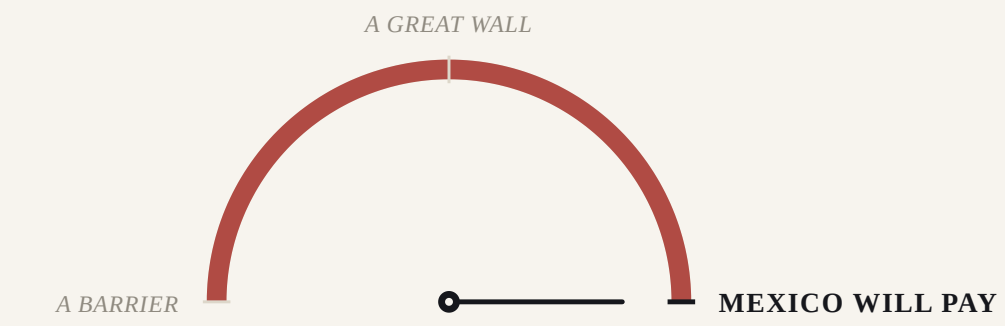

The payer. In March 2016 Mexico's treasury secretary said "Mexico will under no circumstance pay for the wall" [1]. That August, after meeting Mexico's president, Trump said of payment, "We didn't discuss that"; the Mexican president said within hours that he had told him at the start Mexico would not pay [2].

So the bill went elsewhere. The February 2019 plan paired $1.375 billion from Congress, for about 55 miles, with up to $8.1 billion moved from other accounts: $601 million from the Treasury Forfeiture Fund, up to $2.5 billion in counterdrug money, and up to $3.6 billion reallocated from military construction [3]. And the 81 percent of first-term miles that replaced existing barrier, rather than going where none stood [4]. Then the July 2025 law appropriated $46.5 billion for barriers, available through September 30, 2029 [5]. Mexico will pay. The appropriation says who did.

REPUBLICAN

MEXICO WILL PAY

The promise, from the announcement in June 2015: "I will build a great, great wall on our southern border and I will have Mexico pay for that wall" [1]. The first half is the part to take seriously, because it happened. By the end of the first term about 458 miles of barrier had been built [2]. Since January 2025, Customs and Border Protection reports 59 new miles of primary wall and 42 of secondary [3].

The case for the wall is that a border is a line and a line needs a barrier, and on miles, the promise delivered something a voter can drive out and touch. The second half of the sentence is the one with a payer in it. That half is on the other side.

“I'm just going to read the payers, in order. Congress, 2019: one point three seven five billion, about fifty-five miles. The Treasury forfeiture fund: six hundred one million. Counterdrug money: up to two and a half billion. Military construction: up to three point six billion. Congress again, last year: forty-six and a half billion, available through 2029. Sorry — I'm leaving, I'm leaving — that's the whole list. Which line on it is Mexico?” — Lou

“"I will have Mexico pay for that wall." Mexico's treasury secretary said "under no circumstance" in 2016, and they meant it. So the first term paid for it out of military construction money, drug-war money, and a forfeiture fund. Then last summer Congress wrote a check for forty-six and a half billion dollars. Mexico did pay for the wall. Mexico is a code name for you.”

“Mexico is paying indirectly, through the economic benefits of a secure border, which show up in the budget under a different heading, the one that says United States.”
